Matching and Guessing Game Tips and Ideas

- They could be a bulletin board, display, or printed sheets and forms.
- Printed sheets and forms could be matching or fill in the blank.
- It could be a flip up chart with an instant answer.
- Will you give away an instant prize or will there be a weekly or monthly drawing?

Maybe there will be no prizes or it will be a group endeavor like reaching a goal.

- Have patrons write down contact information on slips of paper asking for things like name, age, and phone number, email... Patrons could turn in the answer sheet with their contact information included or they could cut off the bottom of the sheets with their contact information to be turned in for a drawing.

Open Mic (P, E, T, A)

Read with Royalty (P, E with teen volunteers) – Have volunteers dress like princesses, princes, kings and queens. Either have the kids read to the characters or have the characters read to children one to one or in small groups.

Big Rigs or Truck Petting Zoo (P-E) – Have other city departments bring their trucks to the library. Kids can sit in them and get a closer look at the trucks. Some possible trucks: fire, EMS, garbage, lift, fork lift, tractors, delivery trucks...Make sure EMS and fire trucks have an easy way to leave if needed.

Dance: Glow in the Dark Dance Party (E, T)
Use model magic, glow in the dark make-up and tattoos, white frosting on cupcakes, glow in the dark sunglasses (tubular) and tiaras to put together (and necklaces), glow in the dark ping pong, glow in the dark wall decorations like stars and moon posters.
Debbie, Saginaw Library

Zen Garden (T) – Use Altoid tins, colored sand and small rocks to make a Zen Garden. Some kids even made tiny rakes. Another idea was to use a larger box to do the same thing.

All About Jazz (T) - Listen to Jazz music, then write jazz poetry.
Ariel Cummins, New Braunfels Library

Book Swap (T) – Have a book swap where kids bring in books. Each kid gets to pick another book to take home. Teens pick papers with number to determine the order for choosing books. Each teen gives a very brief description of the book they brought.
