If this Work is not in the public domain, then signing this document allows this Work to be added to Recollections Kansas. Adding this Work to Recollections Kansas puts it on the Internet for everyone to see. Please check below the permissions and restrictions others may also use the Work on Web sites, print documents, etc.

_____ The local Library and local community may use this Work to promote Recollections Kansas, the Library, and the local community.

_____ No restrictions: Others may copy, distribute, and perform the Work without any restrictions. They may cite author, creator, or copyright holder when appropriate.

_____ Attribution (required): Others may copy, distribute, and perform the Work, but they must provide the title of work and acknowledgement of author, creator, or copyright owner.

_____ Non-commercial (use only): Others may copy, distribute, and perform the Work for non-commercial purposes only.

_____ Derivative (works allowed): Others may create derivative works for copying, distributing, and performing under the same licenses as this Work.

_____ No Derivative (works allowed): No derivative works can be created. Others may copy, distribute, and perform only "verbatim" copies of the Work.

_____ All rights reserved: Work is available only for Recollections Kansas use, others cannot copy, distribute, perform, or create derivative Works under any circumstances.

Signing this form allows the Work to be added to Recollections Kansas and used by others under the permissions and restrictions check above. Signing will not interfere with the Copyright Owner's rights to perform, reproduce, distribute, prepare derivatives, and display the Work described above.

Terms in the “License for adding Work to Recollections Kansas”

WorkID: WorkID is the combination of the owner’s initials followed by the number of the item. If, for example, Chris A. Rippel gave three photographs to Recollections Kansas, then the photograph’s WorkIDs would be car1, car2, and car3. WorkIDs can be filenames for the files of the three photographs.

Author or Creator of Work: Author, artist, speaker, or musician of the work.

Copyright owner: Copyright law gives the author, artist, speaker, or musician copyrights immediately when a work appears in a fixed form, e.g., written down. Ownership of a Work can be transferred to others.

Public domain: Copyright is a license to perform, copy/reproduce, distribute, prepare derivatives, and display Work for a limited amount of time. When this time runs out, as described on the previous page, Works are transferred into the “public domain” where they are freely available to anyone for any use. Works in the public domain are freely available to adding to Recollections Kansas without any restrictions.

Not in the public domain: If works are not in the public domain, then copyright owners of Works must give permission to add Works to Recollections Kansas. The second option, “no restrictions,” means that owner of copyright allows anyone to use the Work for any purpose. The last option, “all rights reserved,” means the copyright owner is only allowing the work to be added to Recollections Kansas. No one else can do anything with the work. Between the second and the last option are Creative Commons rights. Creative Commons allows copyright owners to give some, but not all rights, to others.

Those filling out the form above should check one or more of the licenses listed. Checking “Attribution” allows others to copy, distribute and make derivative works of the original even for commercial use as long as they state the title and the author/creator of the Work. Checking “Attribution”, “Non-commercial,” and “No Derivatives” gives other the right to copy and distribute the original form of the work for non-commercial purposes as long as they include the title and author/creator of the work, but they are not allowed to make derivatives of the work.
